The Electrical Association of Philadelphia presents

OSHA 10 Safety Training
March 19 & 20, 2020

What is OSHA? OSHA, or Occupational Safety and Health Administration, is a governmental organization which requires employers to provide training to workers who face hazards as part of their jobs. OSHA defines specific safety standards and provides training materials to help keep employees safe in the field.

This OSHA 10 Safety Training will provide attendees with the 10-hour safety certification primarily geared toward the entry level employee. Training emphasizes hazard identification, avoidance, control and prevention, not OSHA standards.

Some of the many subjects covered will be:

1. Reporting injuries/fatalities
2. General industry standards
3. Construction industry standards
4. Personal protective and lifesaving equipment
5. Material handling, storage, use and disposal
6. Tools – hand and power
7. Electrocution
8. Fall protection
9. Confined Space Entry
